Will America Remain Free?

Will America Remain Free? That is a question I'm pondering on this day when a president is to be inaugurated in the United States. I pondered the same question 27 years ago after spending a year researching the foundations of our nation at the Library of Congress. It dawned on me then that if we did not restore those essential foundations, our nation would not remain free. Most Americans are probably just like I was, publicly educated, and ignorant of our true history and foundations. I don't know if Americans are willing to restore those foundations, but if you want to know just a little more, read on.

This will most likely surprise you, but during the 1700s, the most influential people were not presidents, senators and congressmen, media, or celebrities. Clergy, that's right, clergy were the most influential people in the American Colonies, shaping the minds and hearts of present and future leaders and citizens. I discovered this when I indiscriminately read books and publications from the 1700s. Private leaders (like Thomas Clap and Samuel Adams), and public leaders (like George Washington and James Madison), were speaking the same truths that the clergy had been preaching and teaching previously, but usually without reference to the Bible. Without the clergy, there would have been no United States as it was founded.

The full manuscript documenting the oneness of mind of American leaders during the 1700s, and their shared Judeo-Christian beliefs, is still unpublished. But a few weeks ago, I published the chapter on the clergy as its own little book, titled, Fire At The Founding.

If you want America to remain free, then we must rebuild its foundations. That rebuilding begins with you and with our clergy. Buy a book for yourself, and buy a second one for your pastor or priest. You and he will both be inspired and equipped for such a time as this.

IBooks and eBooks are available through GLC Publications, and print through Amazon.
